After an outstanding and successful record of achievement over more than two decades, Ziehl-Abegg bids farewell to Thomas Brommer as the Vice President Global Sales Ventilation Systems takes his well-earned retirement. Brommer’s great commitment and impressive performance has enabled him to contribute towards the company’s success story.

Thomas Brommer began his impressive career at Ziehl-Abegg in May 2002 as Sales Director International Ventilation Systems. Then 41 years old and a graduate in economics, he brought with him extensive experience gained previously at Werner & Pfleiderer in Stuttgart and Deutsche Babcock Borsig AG in Berlin. Most recently, he held management positions at Turbo-Lufttechnik GmbH in Zweibrücken.

Brommer had studied sales management at the University of Hohenheim. He put this theoretical knowledge directly into practice. At Ziehl-Abegg, he developed the global sales and market strategy and built up the worldwide sales organization by establishing the Group's own companies on every continent. His tireless efforts led to the development of new international markets in Asia, North and South America.

In February 2004, Thomas Brommer was appointed authorised signatory, taking over responsibility for numerous foreign companies, including in countries such as Australia, China, the United States, Brazil and many others.

Dr. Marc Wucherer, CEO of Ziehl-Abegg, pays tribute to Thomas Brommer's extraordinary achievements: "Thomas Brommer is the person who helped Ziehl-Abegg to generate a massive increase in volume. He built up the entire global sales organization and consequently made a significant contribution towards the growth and success of Ziehl-Abegg. His commitment and innovative capacity are extraordinary."

Ziehl-Abegg would like to thank Thomas Brommer for his many years of loyalty, his tireless commitment and the significant successes he has achieved for the company. CEO Wucherer: "I am pleased that Mr. Brommer will be remaining with the company as an advisor on strategic topics."
